KS

As the scholastic year commenced, S-M East was more than many students gathered together for an educational purpose. An element of experience and leadership existed in our midst for the purpose of guiding us, the student body, through a year of varied endeavors and numerous activities.

Coordinating the three Shawnee Mission schools came under the jurisdiction of Dr. Howard McEachen, superintendent. Mr. Carl Ison accompanied East into its sixth year of existence as principal. He was assisted in his duties by vice-principals Mr. Richard Trast and Mr. David Schmidt. An assembly of four counselors maintained an advisory position on matters of schedule and college selection. An efficient office, custodial, and cafeterial staff ably executed technical necessities.

The administration of our school acknowledged and accepted the challenge of aiding all students in understanding their responsibilities and positions as members of the student body and in promoting the attainment of their personal goals. By this conscious contact with the individual, as well as through curriculum, teachers, and equipment, the administration led us in fulfilling the 1963-1964 school year to the highest expectations.

Shawnee Mission East was guidance.

Leading a force of thousands of soldiers is no small undertaking, nor is heading a district of nearly 15,000 students. This, though, was the task of Dr. Howard D. McEachen, superintendent. In his twentieth year as commander-in-chief of the Shawnee Mission district, Dr. McEachen was well acquainted with the duties of budget-balancing, property upkeep, and supervision.

Guiding the Shawnee Mission East battalion was Mr. Carl Ison, principal. By his frequent contact with both students and faculty, Mr. Ison's voice became a very familiar one throughout the school.

Other important voices were those of the four counselors, Miss Gene Criley, Mr. Richard Fisher, Mr. Philip Larson, and Mrs. Vinita Stevens. All four were jointly in charge of schedules, colleges, and testing.

United in purpose, adminstrators battled together towards common goals of efficiency, excellence, and accomplishment in both school and district.

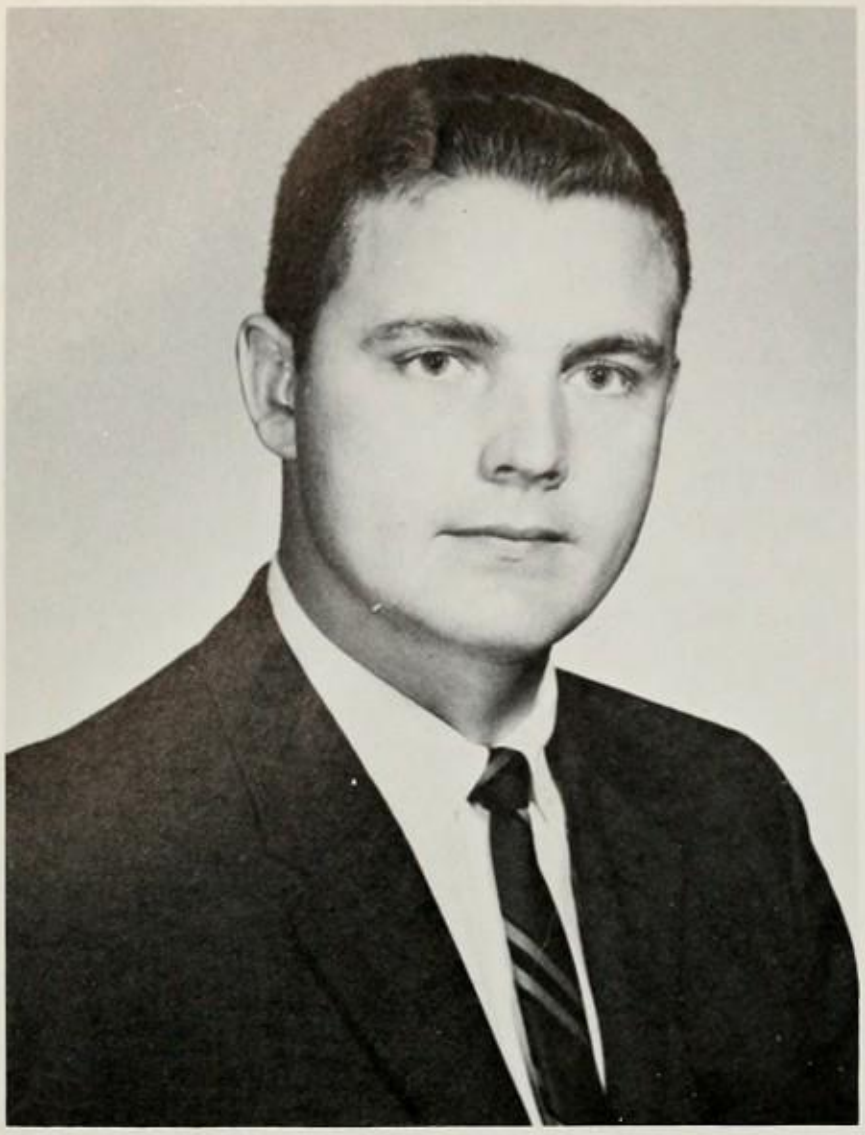
V. P.'S AND THE P.T.A.



Mr. David L. Schmidt, Vice-Principal

It has been said that all roads lead to Rome. If this is so, then surely the offices of the vice-principals were the Rome of S-M East. The two men who occupied these offices, Mr. David Schmidt and Mr. Richard Trast, became virtual jacks-of-all-trades, for their realm of responsibility included attendance, discipline, student activities, and general administrative work.

As the vice-principals were a point of contact between school and student, it was also necessary to have a unifying tie between school and parent. This need was met by the Parent-Teachers' Association. Led by President Mrs. Stan Rose, the 1963-64 P.T.A. was a distinctly active one. A discussion on school unification, a college clinic, and the annual Back-to-School Night were examples of the wide variety of programs.

Through both the P.T.A.'s contacts with parents and the vice-principals' work with students, new bonds of understanding developed in all phases of school life.

Shawnee Mission Teachers' Association Officials. Mr. Vick, president; Mr. Cormack and Miss Lindell, representatives.

LAUNCHING EFFICIENCY

Launched by district directors and the Faculty Association, a program for educational efficiency ascended steadily upward.

Three men headed district procedures. Mr. Gayle Chubb, as Director of Personnel, staffed our schools; Dr. Herbert Bruning, Director of Curriculum, arranged school programs; and Mr. Guy Barnes scheduled transportation to fill and empty our schools.

In the interim the faculty assumed the task of education with advanced techniques. In special committees and scheduled meetings of the Faculty Association, teachers of the district combined progressive ideas to improve educational methods and materials.

By utilizing innovations such as team teaching and ability grouping, S-M schools met the demands for higher classroom and administrative standards.

Guy Barnes, Administrative Assistant; William Studyvin, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds; Gayle Chubb, Director of Personnel.

Office staff members man their posts in preparation for the morning's numerous administrative duties.

ADMINISTRATIVE AUXILIARY

Just as no dramatic production succeeds without an efficient stage crew, no school can be successful without the contributions of responsible "backstage" workers.

In the office, a crew of six carried out their duties to insure a smooth-running production of school life. Mrs. Faillace checked attendance while Mrs. Walters, bookkeeper, handled debits and credits. As Mrs. Piper pressed levers and answered phones at the switchboard, Mrs. Parks recorded grades, Mrs. Whisenhant was secretary to Mr. Ison, and Mrs. Lammers served in the same capacity to the counselors.

Next door to the office, Mrs. Paula Lavarentz, R. N., manned the band-aid brigade. In the kitchen and in the cafeteria, Mrs. Marietta Jack and a staff of thirty-one provided noontime fare of hot meals, meal-in-one or fruit salads, and snack bar offerings for five shifts of "lunchers".

Other important "stage hands" were the custodians, led by Mr. Gene Reed. From unlocking doors to cleaning, they performed a multitude of necessary duties.

Without the vital backstage help of the nurse, office and kitchen staffs, and custodians, the drama of life at S-M East could not have been produced.

Our school was personified by the faculty and the courses they presented to us. Daily we made personal contacts with those dedicated to our education, the members of the faculty. As we attended classes, we realized that each combination of students and a teacher created a specific attitude, atmosphere, and relationship.

School was a situation of learning, research, concentration, and study in a number of areas. The goal of the language, English, and speech departments was communication by various media. Business and shop classes encompassed a diversity of practical arts. Social science undertook the aim of acquainting us with the historical past, present, and future. In the fine arts section of the curriculum, music and art classes enabled the development and expression of talent and esthetic appreciation. A knowledge of physical, chemical, biological, and numerical properties resulted from the probings into science and math.

The conjugation of aller, the significance of Shay's Rebellion and shorthand symbols, the knowledge of aluminum's valence, and the skill of charcoal sketching were characteristic of our scholastic pursuits in preparation for the future.

CREATION A LA MODE

The recipe was simple. Take imagination, enough to stimulate an idea, add generous cups of talent, mix well with ability, patience, and practice; and before long the arts and crafts department was "cooking up" portfolios canvassing each method and media.

The elementary forms of dot drawings served as appetizers for reviving summer-rested wits and unpracticed hands, but they lacked the savor which developed from color theory, lithography, and the experience that came from working with oil mediums.

Brew from the "crafts kitchens" boasted zesty samples of silver jewelry and sculpture while ceramics baked in the kiln.

The total picture was one of a well-balanced diet of combined techniques learned in both areas of study.

ACCOUNTING FOR BUSINESS

A clatter of keys and a scratching of pencils heralded diligent study in the business department. Despite individual characteristics, the related courses all demanded quick wits and nimble fingers.

Novice typists studied letter forms and mastered timed writings while others learned to operate a host of business machines. An investigation of business law revealed competant methods of personal business from insurance to social security. Balancing liabilities with assets and tracing stray cents were the subjects of bookkeeping. Notehand pupils took meaningful notes while shorthand students mastered phonetic spelling and transcription. Stenographers suited proper mechanical methods of good human relations.

The ability which they worked to perfect was a useful proficiency in public and private affairs. The discipline of the office, working pleasantly and productively with others, was an experience the students retained regardless of future professions.

LITERAL AIRS OF GRAMMAR HEIGHTS

Judy Baker, surrounded by an Elizabethan atmosphere is not surprised to find Macbeth reviewed in "Books of the Day."

Accompanied by tingling macabre touches of Poe and musical rhythms of Tennyson, junior and sophomore English students drifted into an absorbing atmosphere of poetry and prose from many corners of the earth.

Entertaining stories and lyrical verses presented enjoyable reading material as the world-famous dramas of Shaw and Shakespeare deepened the atmosphere and produced vivid climaxes to the respective literature sections. Grammar, the second requisite of the course, combined a rigorous review of rules with steady flow of creative compositions.

Warm spring breezes had a disheveling effect on the concentrated atmosphere. The English students relinquished their writing roles until the next year's course began.

Through keen perspective and dynamic expression of thought and statement, senior English and drama students reflected life in a spectrum of individual tastes and personal impressions.

The seniors displayed their view of the world with a technique known as "expository writing." They probed all forms of contemporary literature for clues to style and inspiration. In just 30 Days they widened their vocabularies and extended their intellectual horizons. The seniors rebuilt their thought processes and literary skills with a view to a better understanding of life and a more impelling way of representing it.

In drama, another creative class, students found wider opportunity for mirroring the play of life. There was actual performing; first pantomime to educate the body, then delivery of lines to train the voice, finally whole scenes. These students continually strove to gain refinement to create more powerful portrayals of people and events.

The aim of senior English and drama, an image of reality, more nearly resembled a kaleidoscope, with as many variations as there were individual views, each hue representing an idea or ideal.

HISTORICAL SIGHT

In order to comprehend current political events, social science students perused the newspaper and found interests beyond local news and amusements.

A wide range of courses was offered to cultivate political insight. The investigation of World History, contrasting early to modern civilizations, and American History, from explorers to gerrymandering strategms, provided a comprehensive study of the past. Economics and International Relations delved into current political mazes. Citizenship correlated the social science of history, government, and economics for all seniors.

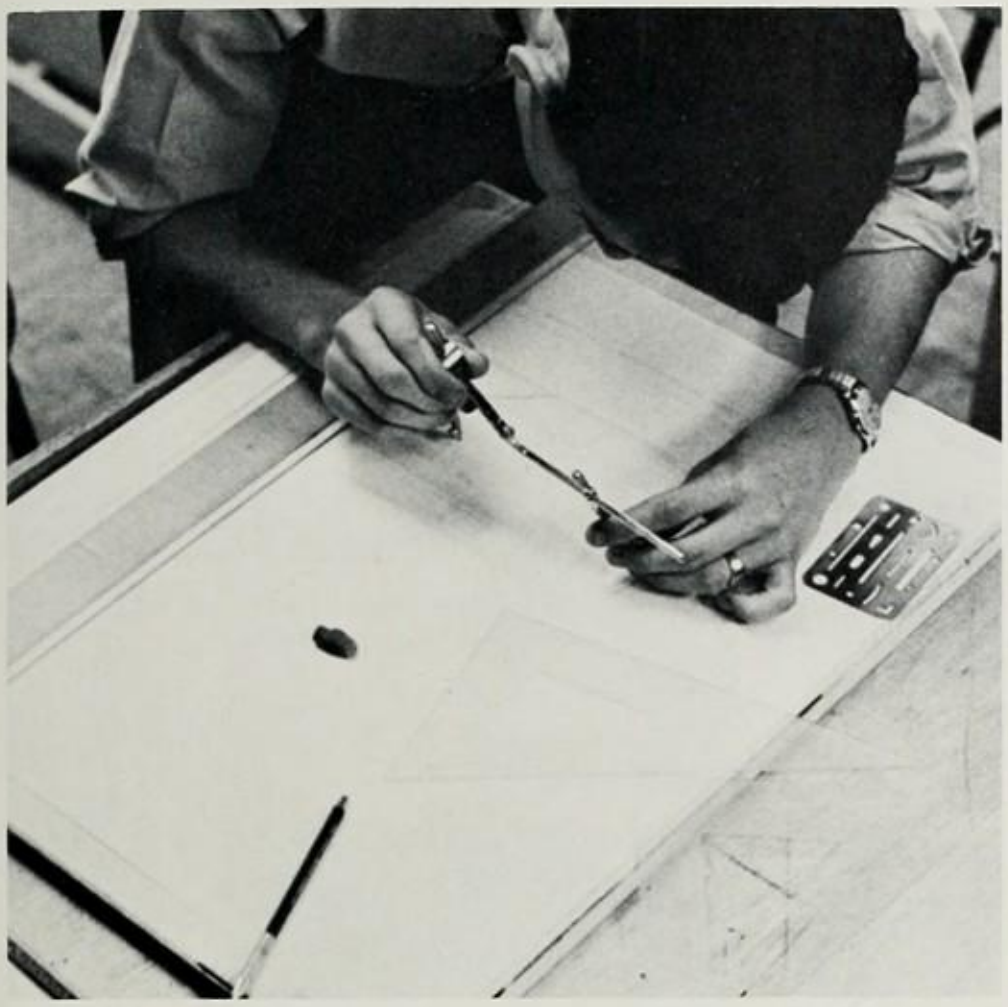
SHOPPING FOR MANUAL DEXTERITY



A drafting student stretches his material to effectively compute how many books, papers, and coats can fit into his locker.

With a year of individual creation ahead, practical arts students, hoping for cultivated skills and consummate workmanship, determinedly viewed rough wood, raw metals, disconected circuits, and drafting problems.

A tool in an adroit hand with technique from a resourceful mind proved a successful combination in the year's projects. Splintered walnut, shaped by innumerable implements, became mirror-smooth tables. Other manipulations created metal cabinets. While using circuit testers and voltage meters, electricity students studied a variety of properties from friction to complex induction theories. Drafting students, aided by drawing instruments, formed many geometric shapes in architectural study.

Surpassing the medieval efforts to transform metal to gold, practical arts students alchemized the common raw materials to masterpieced production with mental and manual mastery.

SHIFTING TO AUTOMATION

With the puzzle pieces of auto controls, road riddles, and complex engine entanglements before them, driver's education and auto mechanics students began to assemble the year's numerous sections.

With driving experience previously restricted to two-wheeled skills, the driver's education students exchanged handlebars for a steering wheel and proceeded to master the four-wheeled vehicle. From executing safe passing manuveurs to replacing flat tires, the students became chauffeurs, scholars of road regulations, and part-time mechanics.

PASSPORTS TO LINGUAL FLUENCY

Traveling through a year of verbs and idioms, Shawnee Mission East's foreign language "tourists" became increasingly familiar with the accents and pronunciations from their Romance dialects. Included in traveler's guide books was a variety of translations, conjugations, and derivations.

As the Latin viatores explored the Roman world of Cicero and Caesar, French tourists and Spanish turistas gazed upon a setting of irregular verbs and participles. In comparison, German Auslander investigated an area of gutteral g's and new vowel sounds. At banquets, tourists adopted customs and costumes encountered in their journey.

During the tour of dialects, student travelers frequently made excursions to the language laboratory. These pronunciation drills, combined with guide book exercises, proved to be the passports to success for S-M East's foreign language "tourists".

Modern problem-solvers in Algebra attemped an arrangement of disorderly properties, but all sines seemed to imply the inverse. Proof positive and negative gave new meaning to automatic operations as students learned the "whys" as well as the "hows" of complicated computations.

Along the lines of squares and solids, geometry students sought assets made available through further mathematical insight. Analyzing the congruities of triangles, tracing curving parabolas, and balancing equations were a few of the tasks of Analytical Geometry and Trigonometry classes.

BOOKING PASSAGE

Since the days of the Ancients, the library has always been more than a place of books. From earliest times it provided the gathering place for tranquil consideration or lively discussion, the expression of new ideas or the examination of classic thought.

This tradition was carried on at the library of Shawnee Mission East. Under the attentive eyes of Miss Lane and Mrs. Hibbs the library was kept well stocked with books and periodicals which provided a basis for study of both fact and fiction. The library was constantly filled with students looking for fresh ideas or the support of old ones. Research for the annual term paper and oratorical studies motivated additional members of the diligent throng.

Intent debaters, aspiring writers, and curious browsers found the library more than just a place of books, but the location for currents of thought spanning the centuries.

Students retire to the archives and delve into the fantasies of fiction, the rigors of research, and the solitude of study.

S-M East was the opportunity to pursue interests and hobbies through the varied extra-curricular activities and the club program.

The Synchronettes, cheerleaders, Pep Club, and Honor "L" represented an element of school spirit, pride and enthusiasm. In the realm of student leadership, East was typified by the Student Congress which strove to better the school building and the student body and forged a cooperative link between the administration and the students. The production of plays, operetta, and concerts by those fluent in the fine arts presented the school in the light of musical and artistic appreciation. The Hauberk and Harbinger existed to record the year's events photographically and literally in their respective publications. Wherever his interest lay, each student was able to effectively express his talent through an activity.

Streamers flying from goal posts, a half-time show, an address to "Mr. Chairman" of the Student Congress, the requested curtain calls for a pleasing performance, the informality of sitting on the floor at mixers—these were the events of school life. Shawnee Mission East was activities.

EXECUTIVES

Randy Jacobs and Mr. Hawkins point out strategic possibilities of allowing filibustering in Congress.

With careful planning and able leadership, the Student Congress performed a dual role by providing a vital link between students and administration and introducing the representatives to the problems and pleasures of accomplishing their goals.

President Terry Hogan strove to adapt student plans to administrative policies, and vice-president Jan Monsees coordinated committees. As secretary, Carol Bishop kept meticulous notes and posted important notices. Nancy Nichols, treasurer, controlled congressional capital.

Student Congress committees, the basic organization blocks, helped build a sound program of school and extracurricular activities. The committee chairmen, with both elected and appointed officials of the Congress, and head sponsor Mr. Hawkins formed the Executive Committee. Initiating action, this organization prepared meeting agendas and reviewed matters of school importance.

Student Congress was not a government, but a melting pot for student suggestions and an organizer of extracurricular programs. The Congress benefitted students by exposing them to democratic process and linking them with administration, while rewarding representatives with opportunity for service.

SPORTING A SOCIA

Just as energy is essential in triggering off movement, leaders are needed to stimulate an organization. The Student Congress was no exception, so with gavel, pen, and Robert's Rules of Order, the officers of 1964 set the Congress in motion. Chairman Randy Jacobs presided over both Congress and executive committee sessions while Bob Lutz, parliamentarian, resolved disputed questions of order and supervised lost and found. The duties of historian and letter-writer fell to Susie Bornstein, corresponding secretary.

Other forces needed to keep the Student Congress moving were the committees, such as those providing recreation and entertainment through sports and parties. The intramurals committee, headed by Paul Clendening, supervised the boys' intramural program by scheduling games and hiring officials. Co-chairmen Marsha Wise and Eileen Hogan directed the social committee in choosing decorations, themes, and bands for dances.

With officers inciting its motion and committees pacing its speed, Student Congress '64 was propelled smoothly through the social, athletic, and governmental year.

SERVICES SCORE

Working jointly through Student Congress and also individually, committees discharged major congressional duties.

The Elections Committee, under chairman Mike Valk, ran class and student body elections, while the Student Exchange Committee, led by Sharon Katz and Gail Vosburg, planned the student exchange carnival and student-faculty basketball game and looked into exchanges with other high schools. The School Improvement Committee and its chairman, Jan Rogers, lent their talents toward providing school directories, orientating substitute teachers, and selecting participants for area law days.

Through fair elections, efficient exchanges, and all-around improvement, committees affected a variety of services.

O.C.A. CIRCUMSPECTS ACTIVITIES

O.C.A. members seem all thumbs as they lend a hand in coordinating Homecoming and the senior assembly.

Working in the center of Shawnee Mission East's circle of projects, the Organization for Coordinating Activities helped to bring about a smoother operation of school affairs. Directed by Student Congress vice-president Jan Monsees the O.C.A. included representatives from the Hauberk, Harbinger, cheerleaders, Student Congress officers, the class presidents, Pep Club president and vice-president, and club presidents.

Encircled in the organization's radius of duties were the Homecoming queen and A. F. S. king and queen elections. By serving as a check for the major school activities, the O. C. A. was able to keep the school's wheel of projects rolling smoothly.

In order to give the committee a clearer conception of the school's needs, meetings were open to give students a chance to voice their opinions. Through the discussions with club presidents and homeroom officers, the O. C. A. was constantly informed of any new happenings. With cooperation from the entire student body, the compass of the O. C. A. was able to swing a perfect circle around school activities.

Student Congress committees, as a prism, reflected an array of services which publicized and operated Congress events during the year.

Several Student Congress committees provided services of entertainment and usefulness. The Publicity Committee, co-headed by Laurie Langteau and Vicki Turner, announced council activities. With Tom Hummel at the helm, the Service Committee smoothly sailed through a sea of obligations by assigning representatives to dance responsibilities, operating the student bookstore, and selling party refreshments. Under the direction of Steve Brick, the Assemblies Committee introduced talent programs and collected a contribution for the United Fund. With leadership by chairman Susie Bornstein, the Communications and Evaluations Committee, composed of Congress representatives and other students, met regularly to discuss problems in order to evaluate policies which affected the students and administration.

As a prism refracts a color spectrum from light, committee members transformed the hues of school life to a chromatic myriad of service for students by willingness to work.

GOVERNMENT IN ACTION

As they passed laws, elected officials, and wrote party platforms, they gave the appearance of politicians from head to foot. These were the delegates to Boys' and Girls' State, two conventions sponsored yearly by the American Legion and its Auxiliary and emphasizing "government in action."

From senators' "authorizing" new roads to campaigns complete with fireworks, Boys' State had all the trimmings of real government. S-M East delegates included Bob Lutz, Jon Brant, Terry DeFraties, Mike Valk, Eldon Silverman, Dick Hiersteiner, Bob Thorp, Bill Marvel, Charley Underwood, and Randy Jacobs, who was also a delegate to Boys' Nation.

S-M East's female statesman was Girls' Stater Jan Rogers. In addition to a study of Kansas government through participation in mock events, the Girls' State program included a Bar exam and a red-poppie banquet.

All delegates gained new insight into the problems, powers, and processes of government, which at Boys' and Girls' State was truly of, for, and especially by the people.

KEYNOTE OF SERVICES

Members of the Key Club built their activities on a cornerstone of service to the school and community. They strove to uphold ideals of democracy, faith, leadership, and brotherhood in all their dealings and gained broader perspective as members of an international organization.

Terry DeFraties, president, coordinated club plans, assisted by vice-president Fred Erickson and secretary-treasurer Mal Anderson. Guided by sponsor Mr. Swanson and Kiwanis liason Mr. Stebbins, the members decided on meeting programs and philanthropic projects. Interested in the qualities of good citizens and successful business men, they listened to guest speakers from many trades and professions.

Constantly striving for the betterment of themselves and their community, Key Club members pursued several altruistic projects. Through gifts of time and talent, the Key Clubbers increased their experience in human relations and helped ease human need.

STAGED BY Y CLUBS

Their platform of service well established, the "Y's" carried a majority in the house of humanitarian interests.

Efficiency in the Y-Teens cabinet, as illustrated by President Jennifer Johnson, Vice President Lynda Hoff, Secretary Suzi Fisher, and Treasurer Candy Kittle, provided equilateral balance for growing as a person, growing in friendship, and growing in the knowledge and love of God. These goals were seen in activities ranging from selling concessions to expanding interests through lectures, and making gifts for hospital patients, orphanages, and rest home residents.

The enterprising Hi-Y, proficient in the area of pencil salesmanship, kept students in readiness with plenty of lead while hitting the "bull's eyes" on monetary targets. President Jim Fields, Vice President Jack Fisher, Secretary John Duke, Treasurer Larry Matschull, and Chaplain Phil Geiger, composed the dutiful executive cabinet.

1963-64 remains a year of worthwhile achievement as illustrated by the Hi-Y and Y-Teens organizations.

The odds are with Y-Teens' members as they spin the globe to locate the site of their next service project.

EXECUTIVES CALL

Adding their own special kind of color and excitement, Pep Club members scrambled onto bleachers and grandstands to support the school athletic teams. With cheers and chants they boosted morale and added spirit. Bright posters and ardent enthusiasm were their trademarks; increased school spirit and well-supported teams were their goals.

President Wally Scott presided over Pep Club meetings while Jennifer Johnson coordinated committees and prepared Homecoming. Nancy Ruzicka, secretary, checked home-game attendance. As treasurer, Candy Kittle decorated walls with posters, goalposts with crepe paper, and boosters with buttons.

The Executive Committee was composed of Pep Club officers, class representatives, and delegates from related organizations. This group sponsored Homecoming and Basketball Sweetheart coronations in addition to arranging game publicity and effecting all other Pep Club decisions.

The Pep Club, with the new Honor "L," supplied a highly organized center for pride and school spirit, giving students an opportunity to display their high enthusiasm and to add their essential support to the school's athletic teams.

FIRES FOR SPIRIT

With a spark of enthusiasm from a high-spirited torch, Shawnee Mission East's Pep Club started the fire for Lancer victory. Roaring throughout the year, the flames of enthusiasm spread quickly into every class.

Through Friday's weekly pep assemblies and hall cheering, energetic "team backers" displayed their burning support at S-M East. During the meetings, Pep Club officers informed the members of outstanding achievements or records in athletics.

In order to stimulate activity, pepsters were asked to volunteer for the poster, decorating, hospitality, or check-in committees. A new service group of spirit burners was the senior girls' Honor L. With membership based upon merit, its purpose was to promote initiative and enthusiasm. The Lettermen's Club, also built up the fire by setting examples at games and in school.

By the end of the year, the flicker of spirit, started six years ago, had grown into a raging bonfire which continued to burn for all S-M East students and graduates.

TOWARD VICTORY

With chants of victory and cheers of spirit, Shawnee Mission East's 1963 cheerleaders outlined the paths to success. As guides for pepsters the girls set constant examples of enthusiasm throughout the school.

On Thursdays and Fridays before school the cheerleaders were in the bottom hall brightening the victory road. Accompanied by the activity band, they led songs of "Hey We're the Lancers" and "Rock Around the Goal Post."

Not only did these girls chart the way for lines of spectators at games, but they continually directed the weekly pep assembly. New cheers and chants from these guides also put the club in motion during the year.

The girls obtained their drive by holding practices after school. By mapping the yells, songs, and pep skits, the cheerleaders became even more familiar with winning routes.

Throughout the year, rain and early morning practices did not dampen the girls' spirit. The cheerleaders, with lively enthusiasm, never failed as guides down victory paths.

Represented in a poised tableau of smiling alertness, the Synchronettes complement precision half-time ceremonies.

Intricate styles, smiles, and rhythms; all of these qualities became the tools for cutting the image of Shawnee Mission East's Synchronettes. Under the direction of Mrs. Carolyn Howard, the drill team performed at home game shows, a Kansas City Chiefs' football game, and other guest appearances.

In order to carve a model impression, the marchers practiced daily during seventh hour. However, before specific events, they often held early morning or evening rehearsals. Working to the beat of music and time counts, the drill team preserved their image until special occasions when they dressed in boots and vivid uniforms. With smiles and complex routines, S-M East's marchers made a lasting impression on the spectators at their numerous shows.

The Synchronette assembly in the spring drew the curtain on the marching year. As the members displayed practiced formations, they molded the final image of Shawnee Mission East's 1963-64 Synchronettes.

HOMECOMING FLOATS DOWN MOON RIVER

Drifting through an October evening, Shawnee Mission East's Homecoming for 1963 floated on a festive but serene Moon River. The weeks of anticipation, navigated by Pep Club vice-president Jennifer Johnson, came to a climax during the half-time ceremony at the Shawnee Mission district stadium.

As the yellow moon sailed across the float's blue and white horizon, last year's queen, Sheri Humphreys crowned Nancy Ruzicka and presented the royal cape. Her attendants, Jill Marsh, Jan Monsees, Martha Griffin, and Susan Bresnick received white carnations and crowns. Accompanied by the strains of "Moon River," the cars and float took a final tour around the football field.

The night following the coronation, the queen and attendants reigned over the Homecoming dance. As the final dock loomed in the distance, Shawnee Mission East drifted back to reality after a weekend along the Moon River Homecoming.

COURTLY REIGN GRACES FESTIVITIES

The romance of the approaching Valentine's Day and the thrill of a close basketball game combined to set the tone of the 1964 Basketball Sweetheart ceremony. The ceremony, in turn, embellished the basketball season with a red and white splendor.

Honored during halftime of the Wichita Southeast game were Basketball Sweetheart Miss Bobbie Jo Ferguson and attendants Miss Marsha Wise and Miss Georgie Cooper. The three were elected by the entire Pep Club from a list of thirty chosen by the Pep Club executive committee and reduced to sixteen by the basketball team. After following the drill team and the thirteen runners-up down a regal red carpet, the Sweetheart and her attendants were crowned and presented corsages of red and white carnations. A trio of plush taffeta hearts was arranged as a background for the ceremony.

The team shared in the royal excitement, contributing an upset basketball victory as the finishing touch to a majestic evening of hearts, happiness, and memoriable hues of red and white.

HAUBERK QUEEN ACCENTS MARDI GRAS MOTIF

Sally Richardson

Set among the streets of New Orleans, the semi-formal gaity of Mardi Gras provided the theme for the 1964 Hauberk dance. Glitter, harlequins, and streamers accented the Old French tradition with sparkling decor.

During the week before the dance, the sixteen candidates were announced and voted on in class assemblies. During the intermission the excitement reached a peak as in the finale of an authentic Mardi Gras celebration.

With the background music of "Till", the candidates entered. At the end of the procession came the attendants, Miss Sally Richardson and Miss Susan Phillips, followed by 1964's Hauberk Queen, Miss Anita Royer. The attendants received nosegays of yellow mums; the queen's bouquet was yellow roses. The coronation was performed under an ermine-lined crown-shaped throne.

The party continued to catch the savory spirit of Mardi Gras with a shower of multi-colored balloons from the ceiling. Although the evening was over with the final dance, the Creole gaity became a realistic memory from the 1963-1964 Hauberk staff.

SEVENTH-HOUR CHAIN GANG AT WORK

In medieval times, the word "hauberk" referred to a type of chainmail; in 1964, the Hauberk was a chain of memories, connecting all aspects of school life. Administration and curriculum, sports and activities, and especially the student body were all vital links of the chain and integral parts of the yearbook.

The varied segments were joined by a staff of twenty-nine. Art staffers and photographers bound together visual memories of the year through portraits, candids, and original artistic designs, as literary and sports "welders" used thesauri and score-cards to produce vital captions and copy. The final three links, advertisements, senior summaries, and index, were the work of the business staff. Supervising the overall construction of the chain were craftsmen Anne Beeson, editor-in-chief, and Mr. Donald Wilson, sponsor.

Throughout the year, chainmakers forged their way through the world of cameras, dictionaries, and deadlines as they recorded the year 1964 in the Hauberk.

With the year's fragmented happenings to report, the Harbinger newspaper staff assembled harmoniously through words and pictures a kaleidoscopic view of the school.

Staff personnel, chosen from Journalism I, found that tangible success in Journalism II was recorded in the school paper. Student body activities filled the sections of the paper's kaleidoscope. Wishing to report happenings of the year comprehensively, both first and second semester staffs displayed a variegated host of articles. Editorial, feature, news, and sports articles reported the year's events. While capturing the facets of school life, the Harbinger staff profited in newspaper accounting.

As journalists created the bi-weekly news publications, newsprint experience became second-nature. Writing news articles, planning layouts, selling ads, and proofreading were journalistic skills to master.

SENIOR STAFFMEN GAIN DISTINCTION

Headlining the closing year's activities, the initiation of senior journalists to Quill and Scroll featured elite contributers to school publications.

By placing in the top scholastic third of their class for all high school years and by contributing outstandingly to the Harbinger or Hauberk, seniors gained admission to the honorary high school society of journalism, Quill and Scroll.

Stressing the virtues of journalistic endeavors, the candle-lighting ceremony at the annual district initiation with S-M West and S-M North depicted Truth from which Loyalty, Learning, Friendship, Judgment, Initiative and Leadership were derived. To be consummate in these reporting goals was the yearlong undertaking of all journalists.

Capping their high school analysis of journalism, the initiation not only admitted new members but gave them a further realization of pressing responsibilities.

A candle that refuses to light doesn't mar the impressiveness of the Quill and Scroll initiation.

PROFITING WITH

Displaying a feeling of fellowship for future foreign classmates, student exchange week offered shares to purchase and carnival games to raise money and class competition.

Exchange week, highlighted by visiting foreign students of area schools, employed Student Congress members to sell shares and to represent their class for competition for reigning royalty at the weekend carnival.

The transformed gymnasium of placards, crepe paper, balloons, and booths featured a mixture of the traditional bingo and roulette with the modern Beatle walk and basketball throw to provide a "try your Luck" and "you can't lose" evening under senior royalty Wally Scott and Jennifer Johnson.

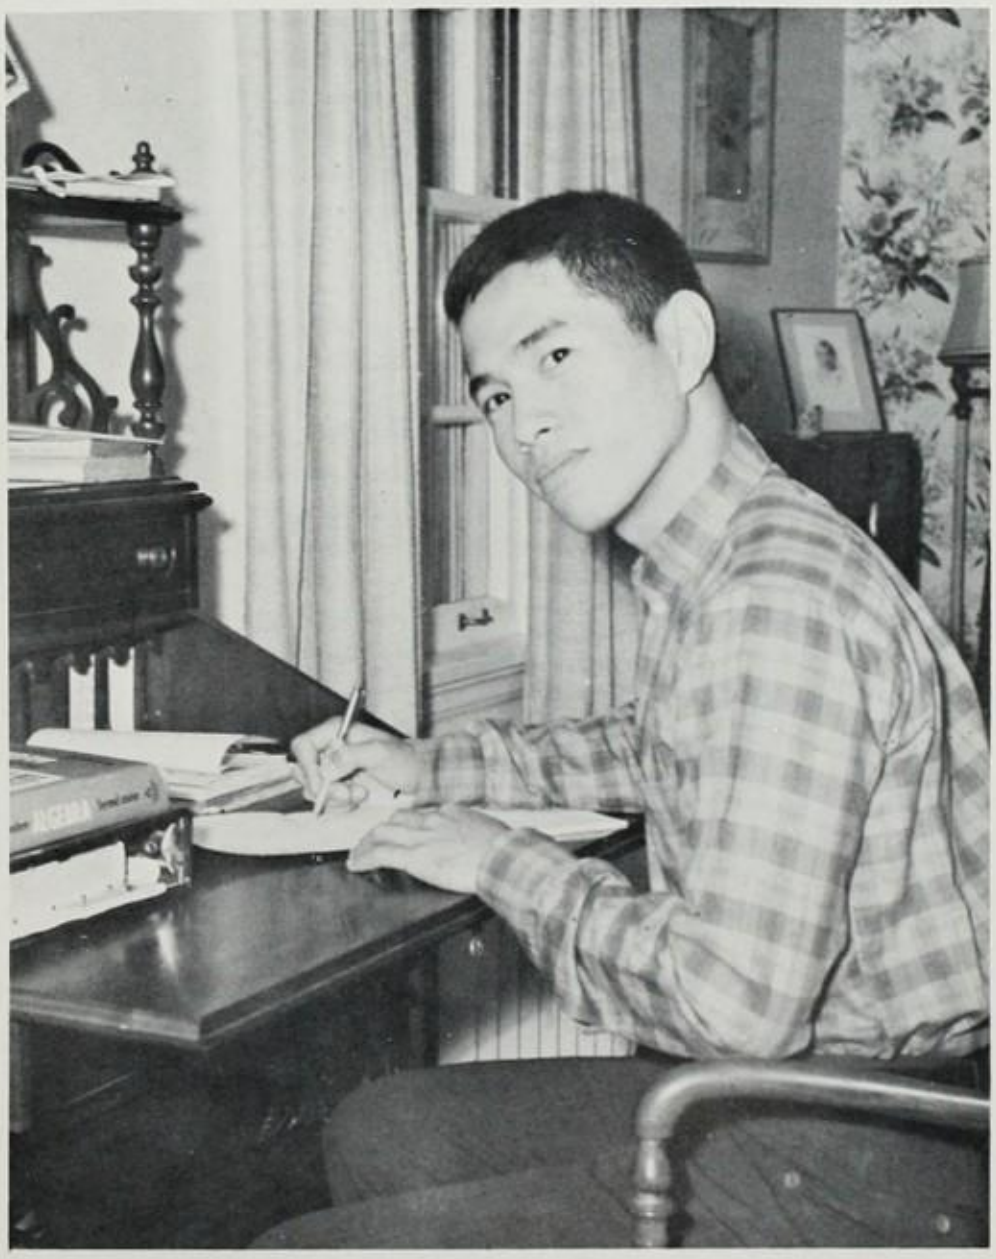
Journeying to and from the far corners of the earth, American Field Service students served as informal envoys from their home lands to schools and families around the globe. A.F.S. students became active members of their overseas communities, and in doing so promoted both international understanding and cultural exchange.

S-M East's ambassador abroad was Nancy Nichols, who made her home in Syria for six weeks. Here she participated in all aspects of family and city life—speaking Arabic, eating unusual dishes such as cactus, and even experiencing a revolution first-hand.

Coming to S-M East for the school year were Emile Armas from the Philippines and Imke Guldner from Germany. Both lived with American families and attended school from August to June, completing their stay with a cross-country bus tour.

By taking part in all phases of life in their adopted countries, A.F.S. "diplomats" provided an important tie between cultures and peoples throughout the world.



Relaxing after an evening of American homework, Emil Armas finds time to dream of his native Philippine home.

HONOR EXTENDED BY NATIONAL SOCIETY

A hushed and anticipating silence hovered over the all-school assembly. After months of screening and observing, there remained only the announcement of those chosen to receive the high recognition of being a member of the National Honor Society. The name was read. Elated applause and a congratulatory hand welcomed the new member.

With the approval of the sponsors, Miss Boys, Miss Lindell, Mr. Young, and Mr. Houston, John Williamson, President; Bill Marvel, Vice President; Doug Winn, Secretary; and Mike Curley, Treasurer, were chosen to govern the organization. During an impressive spring candlelighting ceremony, initiates and former participants in the Society pledged themselves to the goals of leadership, character, scholarship, and service.

The accomplished members of N.H.S. continued to prove themselves an asset to the community and the S-M East student body in their exemplary achievements.

PUBLIC ADDRESS

Distinguished by silver pin insignia, National Forensic League members practiced polished rhetoric and moving oratory. They accumulated points for membership through speech and debate activities as diverse as dramatic interpretation and courtroom presentation. Convincing delivery coupled with diligent study won degrees of honor, excellence, and distinction for fluent speakers.

Under the sponsorship of Mr. Swanson, Dick Hiersteiner, president, organized NFL activities while Bob Jones, vice-president, assisted. Secretary Laura Taber kept records of forensic participation as Bob Levy, treasurer, checked chapter expenses.

The NFL sponsored speech and debate contests with local and out-of-state schools. Its most outstanding achievement was the organization of the first annual Shawnee Mission District debate tournament. In addition to these tasks, it instilled a keen sense of competition in its members. The school chapter of the National Forensic League advanced the use of skillful persuasion and artful interpretation through a well-planned program of practice and improvement.

Congressional propositions on medical care for the elderly prompted S-M East debaters to don stethoscopes in order to find sound syllogisms for this year's question, Resolved: that the federal government should provide complete medical care for all citizens at public expense.

In preparation, logicians filled quote boxes with research remedies for refutation. As the season approached, the affirmative prima facie case and the negative status quo stand were debaters' analyzed answers for an emperical approach to cases.

Traveling over Kansas, the debate squad brought numerous tournament trophies home to Coach Maurice Swanson. Highlighting the victories, S-M East debaters placed second in N. F. L., first in district, and second in state competition. This persuasiveness epitomized their rhetorical training which would lead all debate students to volubility in discussion throughout their lives.

Tom Swale views the material representatives of Shawnee Mission East's six years of debate success.

Activity period heralded class assemblies Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays. Each day a fluid mass of faces, arms, hands, papers, whispers, and yells slid down the stairs and ramps, passed through the auditorium doors, and dissolved into seats.

The fluid mass, now positioned in their cubicles, were liquified particles ready to view the year's presentations. Music arrangements, travelogues, play previews, and films provided audience-soluble solutions for stirring the exciteable liquid before them. Responding to the programs' stimuli, the fluid was cogently fired to a boil by a campaign manager. The mellow mood of a baritone swayed the solution to an undulating movement, but an informative speaker quieted the waves reflectively. The fluid mass fervently followed the assemblies' flow.

The faces, yells, and papers, splashed back through the auditorium doors and up the ramps to class. Assemblies evaporated, but their motivations endured.

A sudden revelation is made audible by peals of laughter interrupting seriousness in an "Exploration in Thought" discussion.

"Something for everyone" was the clue to the array of clubs offered for 1963-64. Enthusiasm ran high while applications were being completed from the wide variety made available to the students.

Avid stamp and coin collectors, wildlife enthusiasts, seekers and expounders of political views, assorted musicians, and even those possessing check-mated kings found pleasure in club activity. During the sessions, travel and language clubs on pseudo voyages brought foreign cultures and mock adventure to the classroom while debates on Freudian theories and human motivations occurred in psychology discussions. Virtually any subject stimulated mindful reactions in Exploration in Thought.

In all areas, the informal atmosphere of the program produced favorable results by extending the opportunity for individual enjoyment among its participants.

THESPIANS PROMPT THEATRICAL CUES

Active in Shawnee Mission East's dramatic affairs, Thespian Troupe 1806 helped to characterize the 1963-64 season. When the curtain rose the stage was dressed effectively for the scenic year.

With the sponsorship of Mr. Farnsworth, the dramatists heard speakers from the Resident and Circle Theatres during their weekly meetings. Throughout the year they also planned the annual Thespian spring assembly and Dramatic Arts and Awards Dinner. This event, the climax of the season, honored the actors and actresses for outstanding performances in school productions.

Prompted by the activities, the troupe became the backbone of S-M East's dramatic year. As Thespians made their 1964 finale, the curtain fell on the accomplished season.

AUTUMN PLAY POSES

With the buzz of a telephone and a peal of laughter, "Pillow Talk" opened the curtain on the 1963-64 dramatic season. Telephones, doorbells, a fertility goddess, and talents galore were combined to produce a pleasing and polished performance.

Set in the world of high society, "Pillow Talk" revolved around the telephone—be it a bright green or a soft pink. At the center of the plot was the party line shared by a fashionable interior decorator and an eligible bachelor songwriter, with complications added by a brassy night club dancer and a "poor" millionaire who "just couldn't get ahead."

For a month and a half, activity and excitement mounted both on stage and back stage. The climax was reached with the final performance, as ticket-holders giggled, chuckled, and just plain laughed their way through a crisp and colorful comedy.

SPIRIT OF SIAM JOINS EAST AND WEST

At the hands of the fine arts department, Siam made oriental the stage of S-M East to capacity audiences.

The "King and I" depicts a man's struggle with himself in a changing world. It is a story of young lovers contrasted by the respectful love shared by the teacher Anna and the King. Through dancing, music, and drama, the audience met the royal children in "Getting to Know You" and saw the inward turmoil of the King's "Puzzlement." Lady Tiang's devotion was sensed as she described the King as "Something Wonderful." At the invitation of "Shall We Dance?" the western world entered Siam.

With the death of the King a new Siam was born. Conscious of this, the audience departed, appreciative of the fantasy which had revealed such basic facts of reality.

CLASSIC PORTRAYAL OF

Shrouded in a classical garb of ancient Thebes amidst civil strife, ran a tale of martrydom, suicide, and politics versus religion in the spring production "Antigone."

Directed by Mr. Rawley Farnsworth, the "Antigone" cast unfolded to the public an emotionally tense drama—simple in structure, but psychologically complex and demanding in its portrayal. A plain set design of black and white allowed each spectator to devote full attention to the story animated before him.

An edict, issued by the King prohibiting the burial of one of Antigone's brothers, is the torch which ignites a blaze of events kindled by want of personal gain, defense of moral laws, love, justice, and the challenging and final defiance of man's authority as opposed to God's.

The reverberating voice of the Greek Chorus resounding through the auditorium marked the close of Sophocles' tragic lesson. But it was a final curtain call, echoing footsteps on a darkened stage, the silence of a barren assembly room, which marked the termination of another season of dramatics at Shawnee Mission East.

A change of heart brings Ismene to Antigone's side, begging to share her fate, as Creon wisely steps aside.

As Creon pleads with open amazement, Antigone continues to defy him with closed mouth determination.

A CLASSICAL STRUGGLE

A tired and frustrated Ross Jay imparts a bit of kingly advice to his page, Steve Rogers.

Caught in the spell of Homecoming enchantment, the regal court sways to the hypnotic melodies in a starry-eyed dream.

DANCES

The doors were open; the mood was set. As the lighthearted spirit of music and fun drifted out, it invited all students to the various Student Congress dances of the year. Such was the atmosphere which accompanied the social pattern of school life.

The mood was a common bond between all the dances, yet each was set apart by its own special theme. Novelty was the byword at October's Cave Dance and January's "Mr. Lucky" party, while the Homecoming and Hauberk dances and the Basketball Sweetheart mixer centered around the familiar tradition of queens and their courts. The "Mistletoe Madness" of the Christmas season and the "Monte Carlo" Prom added touches of formal elegance, just as the after-the-game mixers provided a feeling of informality. February's Student Exchange carnival presented an effective appeal for "Change for Exchange" and April's W.P.A. gave an unusual twist to the usual protocol.

As the year ended, May's Senior Farewell was also a farewell to gala evenings. The carefree atmosphere slowly faded, and the doors were closed on another season of partying at Shawnee Mission East.

Step,slide, step—Jeanne VanZant and Scott Gradinger improvise a new twist for familiar dancing school routines.

Springtime meant Junior-Senior Prom, and Prom time meant flowers, formals, and the fascination of an enchanted May evening. With the Prom came melodies, memories, and, in 1964, the splendor of Monte Carlo.

Brilliant hues of red, gold, and white dominated the scene. Punch served in champagne bottles and walls decked in playing cards illustrated the gay mood of Monte Carlo, as did an immense rotating number wheel. The more subdued side of the city was typified by a glassed in "Starlight room," set-in windows, and a central fountain. There was an old-fashioned elevator; the band played from a "gilded cage." On the east wall an arrangement of mirrors reflected the enthusiasm of the evening.

Prom night was a night of magic. In capturing the spirit of Monte Carlo, Prom 1964 caught the imaginations and feelings, the hopes and memories of all who attended.

SOUNDS OF MUSIC

With lyrics, the singers' element, and notes, the musicians' part, the music department, acting as a funnel, filled audiences with their musical blends.

Vocal vitality and musical magic were manuevered to present precise performances for class assemblies, play productions, and concerts. The nimble fingers of a clarinetist aroused frisky foot-tapping feelings, as mellow singing knotted nostalgic ties in listeners' throats. The band, orchestra, choirs, and individual ensembles harmonized to present a euphonious blend to entertain, cultivate, and excite audiences.

With a liquid mixture of voices and instruments, the music department flawlessly funneled their popular and classical tunes into a container of attentive audiences.

Abandoning their shining instruments, band members take a refreshing pause after a half-time display of rank and file formations.

ON HARMONIOUS INSTRUMENTATION

Under the direction of Mr. Geoffroy, the instrumental music department took its place as a representative of S-M East.

Sparkling with all the brassiness which arouses thoughts of "oom-pah" tubas and John Phillips Sousa, the band appeared as a massive blue unit during opening and half-time game ceremonies. Lilting melodies accompanied formations led by high-stepping drum majors Jerry Ogden and Mike Putman.

Music from Bach to Gershwin found its place in the orchestral repertoire. Through assemblies, concerts, and the operetta, this collection of music makers skillfully displayed their tuneful handiwork.

Acting harmoniously with the band and orchestra was the Symphonic Wind Ensemble, a composite of juniors and seniors, whose major responsibility was public performances. The varied presentations and evident talent of this musically disciplined group appealed to the ears of many audiences.

As ambassadors for S-M East, the unified efforts of the three groups proved to vividly illustrate the validity of the maxim—"Music - the common language."

With a twist of the wrist, Barbara Mahrt flips her baton in a flashy routine at half-time.

With the onset of a new year, the members of the vocal music department commenced a score of musical compositions with a downbeat from Mr. Jess Rose.

Girls' Choir sought exactness of blend and dynamics to become a memorable performing group. Mixed chorus and Beginning and Intermediate Girls' Glee also participated in the many facets of musical achievement.

Versatile in reportoire and talent, the Concert Choir was at ease in antics of comic Assemblies or serenity of candlelight processionals. The choirs of S-M East gave inspiration to audiences during the holiday season's concert programs. Rewards for much preparation went to ensembles and soloists at district, regional, and state contests.

In formal attire, the Chorale reflected a romantic era of madrigal singing. The A Cappella Choir participated in a clinic-concert directed by Mr. Clayton Krehbiel of the University of Kansas music department.

Highlighted by "The King and I" and climaxed by a gala spring concert, the choirs signaled the finale to the year as melodies drifted into memories at the close of graduation ceremonies.

The sports season was initiated by a football kick-off and a cross country starting gun in the leaf-strewn fall. As the weather grew colder, the sports program reorganized and athletes took to the basketball court and swimming pool. Winter turned to spring and track, tennis, and golf assumed their places of importance.

The teams were confronted with several objectives. Individual character was strengthened by the necessity of accepting responsibility. Sportsmanship became a realistic ideal as junior varsity and varsity squads met physical obstacles in competitive games. The personal drive and strict discipline which motivated each athlete was of an inexplicable nature. Victory and defeat symbolized the consummation of diligent practice.

As team and individual standings were achieved and recorded, S-M East teams were classified as a result of their accomplishments. Athletics was the unifying element of interest and physical skill between team members. The thrill of victory, the disappointment of defeat, the tremulous excitement of a ninety-yard run, the satisfaction of a game well-played were recollections of Lancer combat.

Shawnee Mission East was athletics.

EAST AFTER LOSS TO TROJANS

Faced with tougher opposition than in previous years, the 1963 Lancers recorded a 4 and 5 won-lost standing for the gridiron campaign. Behind the devasting performance of Wally Scott, the 1963 squad opened the season with an 18-0 shutout over North Kansas City. Overshadowing Scott's 8-yard TD plunge and 45-yard scoring pass to John Williamson was his 95-yard touchdown punt return. George Baldwin, Burke Castle, and Dick Elliott led East's defensive effort.

After gaining the No. 1 ranking in the city, the Lancers lost a 2-0 heartbreaker in their league opener with the Topeka Trojans.

Triggered by the return of Pat McBride to the lineup, the Lancers swept past Washington 26-7. Wally Scott led the offensive unit with two touchdowns while Mike Garner and Pat McBride each scored a TD.

Although falling to defeat against the powerful Lawrence team, the Lancers finally shattered the scoring barrier against the Lions. Blasting around right end for the only East score, Scott's effort was in vain as the Lancers were overwhelmed, 26-6 on the Lawrence gridiron.

The big play, the element of surprise in football, is written over the faces of Coach Newcomer and halfback Butch Clark.

Venturing North to meet their traditional rivals, the favored Lancers were out-played by the North Indians, 28-13. Wally Scott and Pat McBride were the only Lancers to break the stingy North defense.

Tangling for the first time in East's history, the Hawklets edged the Lancers 6-0 on a freak pass play.

With Sheldon Buttrill replacing the injured Wally Scott, the Canines of Wyandotte were muzzled by the Lancers, 34-6. Buttrill threw two touchdown strikes to end Mike Garner and backs John Williamson, Larry Miller, and Greg Higgins each scored touchdowns.

S-M West shaded the Lancers, 14-7, in the renewal of the seasonal rivalry with the Vikings. East's only touchdown came on a 8-yard toss from Jay Clancey to Doug Winn.

The Lancers ended their football season on a happy note by trouncing the Topeka West Chargers, 26-0. Touchdowns were scored by Bruce Peterson, Butch Clark, Greg Higgins, and Jay Clancey.

'63 HARRIERS CLIMAX

Determination coupled with unsparing effort resulted in a successful East cross-country season. The Lancer distance team captured first in all its dual and triangular meets and then seized fourth in the State Meet at Emporia.

Led by record-breaker George Dent, the '63 Harriers topped Wyandotte in the season opener. Dent along with captain Mike Reading, Warren Gille, and Louis Seibel turned in exceptional performances as East breezed by Washington. The thinclads next churned to a second place finish in the Wichita Invitational followed by a fourth place showing in the Shawnee Mission Invitational.

The Lancer two milers notched an important victory at the S-M Triangular Meet and then finished a close second to the Indians of S-M North in the League Meet.

East earned the right to compete in the State Meet with an impressive second in the regionals. Coach Cormack's runners claimed fourth at State completing the season.

CAGERS VAULT TO SECOND IN LEAGUE

With a varsity squad composed of returning seniors, the 1964 Lancers highlighted the cage season with upset victories over Wichita Southeast and Wyandotte.

East opened its basketball season with a 33-35 loss to their first league foe, the Washington Wildcats.

Traveling to Lawrence, the Lancers edged the Lions 53-50 in overtime for their first victory of the season. Tom Hummel and Dave Snider were the offensive mainstay for East.

Squelching a Bluejay rally in the closing minutes of the game, the East cagers defeated Raytown 57-53. Hummel led the East scorers with 16 points.

In their next two games the Lancers were beaten by Topeka Central 40-38 but crushed the Topeka West Chargers 69-54.

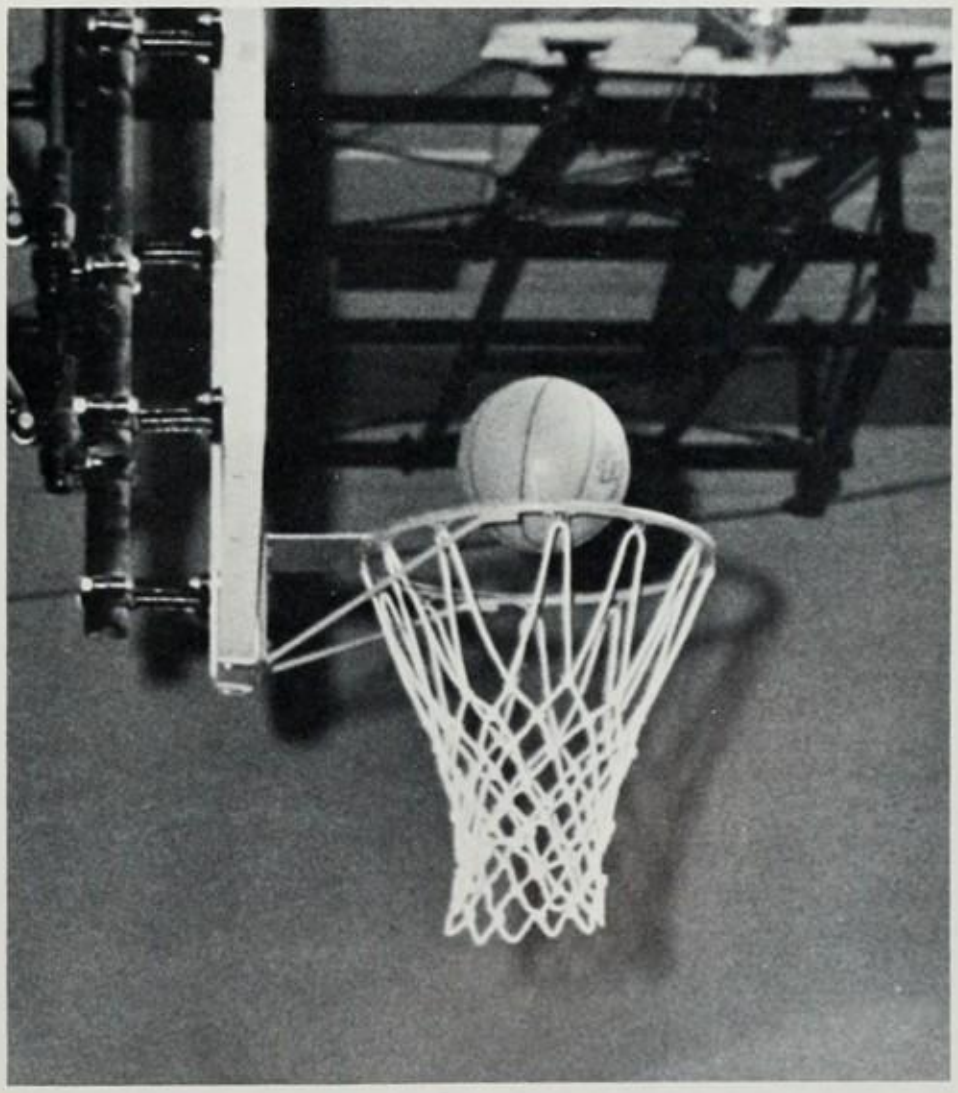
S.E. RARE DEFEAT

Although Tom Hummel and John Williamson each connected for nine points, East fell to Wyandotte's league-leading Bulldogs, 52 to 37, in their next league game. However, the Lancers got back back on the winning trail the following weekend by downing West, 52 to 41. East rallied to win after trailing by nine points in the second period. The nine point performance of Steve Lefton, coupled with a fine full court press defense were the big factors in the win.

Bob Lutz hit an all-time personal high of 19 points against S-M North, but it wasn't enough as the Lancers fell by 47 to 45. A last-second shot by Hummel went in, but the officials ruled that the buzzer had sounded.

East then journeyed to Campus high in Wichita for a three-game tournament. In the opener, the Lancers turned back Campus, the host school, 46 to 45, on Tom Hummel's last-second field goal. Dave Snider, Lefton, and Hummel all tallied in double figures.

The Lancers went on to finish third in the tournament, losing only to highly-rated McPherson in overtime, 59-55. A win over Topeka Seaman, 48 to 42, clinched third.



A promising two points for the S-M East Lancers appear to be in the bucket and out of the reach of their opponents.

Game Number twelve, which again saw East lose to the Trojans from Topeka 70-62, represented the completion of two-thirds of the season. East's record stood at a mediocre six victories against six defeats. However, the Lancers seemed to reach their potential and thus combined superior defense and offense to win six of their last seven regular season games.

Following the Topeka Central loss, East rebounded to capture a 46-44 decision from Washington. A clutch basket by Tom Hummel in the closing seconds made the difference. The following night East lost the lead, and because of an inability to hit free throws, yielded to the Ward Cyclones by the score of 60-55.

Wichita Southeast, then ranked second in the state, was the next SM East victim. The Lancer cagers upset the Wichita squad in a hard-fought contest, 43-42. The switch to a full-court press was enough to provide another Lancer basketball victory.

A week later, with John Williamson and Steve Lefton providing shooting and rebounding strength, East topped Topeka West 54-43.

BULLDOGS SHUT OUT

Playing the highly rated Bulldogs on the Lancer home court, S-M East handed the Bulldogs a 49-48 setback, their second of the season. The East victory also broke the Bulldogs 31 league-game winning streak. A strong defensive game coupled with determination proved too much for the hopeless cagers from Wyandotte. Mike Garner provided the winning goal with seven seconds remaining till the end of the game.

Facing its two closest rivals on consecutive nights, the Lancers trounced S-M West 65-46 and defeated S-M North 42-35. John Williamson's 24 points led the East gunners while Bill Daniels and Bob Lutz also scored in the double figures column. Overwhelming the Indians' offense with an air-tight defense, the victory lifted East into a second place Sunflower League standing.

Again finishing second to the Wyandotte Bulldogs, the S-M East Lancers climaxed a successful season with victories over Rosedale and Ward in the Regionals. Rosedale was defeated 56-50 while the Cyclones suffered a 55-53 setback. The Lancers recorded a very impressive 14-8 basketball season.

GOLFMEN SET SIGHTS ON STATE MEET

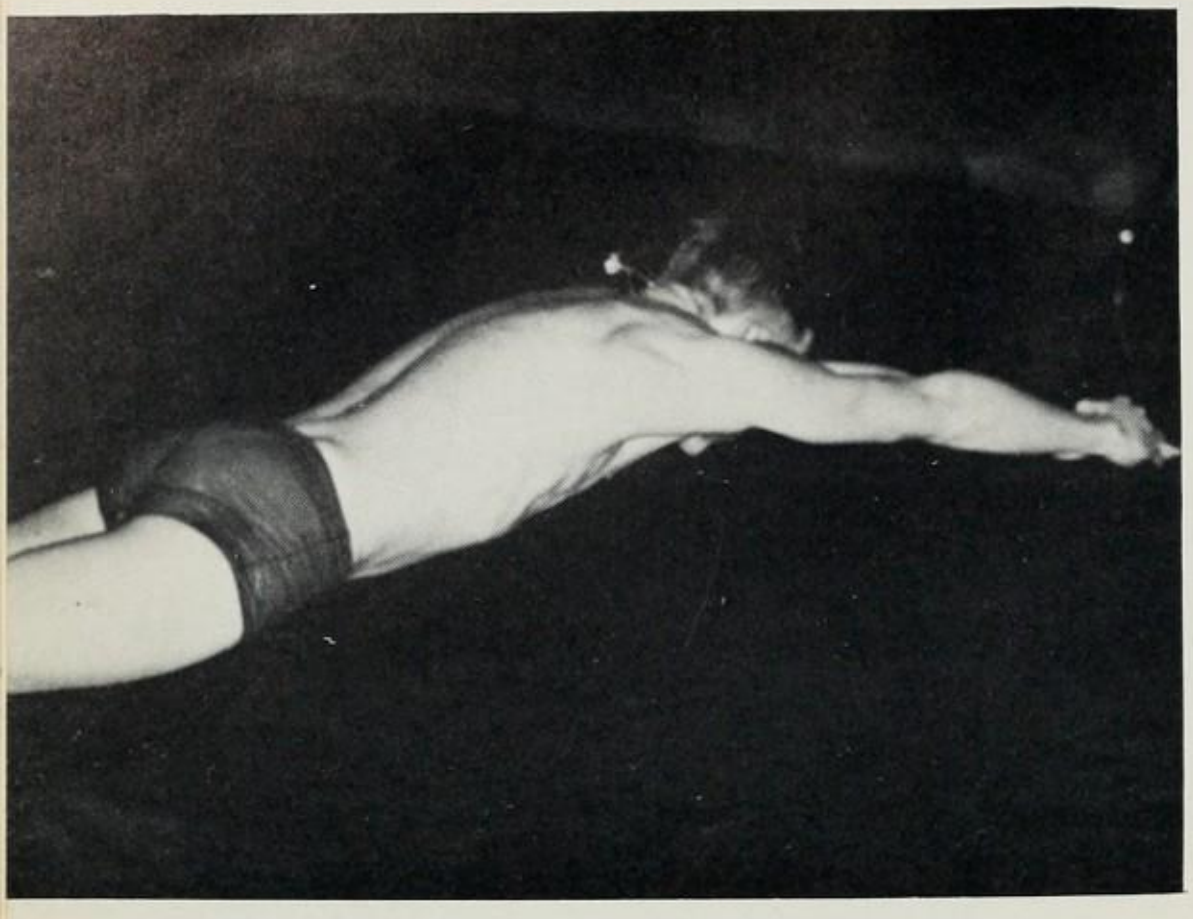
The 1964 Lancer golf season was in full bloom by early April with tryouts for the 12-man squad. Coach Glenn Saunders' senior lettermen Bowen White and Jim Davis had been called upon to compose the nucleus of the 2-man team. Both were outstanding golfers and were counted heavily upon to support the team. Bowen White was a semifinalist in the National Junior Golf Championships the past summer. Other returning seniors include Terry Griffith, Fred Wisegarver, Rusty Wells, Rand McQuinn, and Randy Alexander. Juniors John Callaghan and Mike Senner along with the returning seniors will comprise the East 4-man team.

The initial Lancer golf tournament was scheduled at Manhattan. Because of complications, the tournament was postponed. The first meet for the East linksters will now be the Lawrence Invitational. The Lancers are rated as top contenders for first place honors.

Journeying to Salina for Salina Invitational, the meet provided needed action for the golfers. Other highlights of the golf season were the S-M East Invitational and the State Tournament.

Teeing up his ball, returning letterman Jim Davis adjusts it to his liking before stroking it into play.

TANKSTERS CAPTURE FIFTH IN STATE



Sporting a flawless racing dive, senior Jim Latham stretches for the additional inches needed to supply a Lancer tank victory.

A fifth place finish in the state meet highlighted the Lancers' swimming season. Fred Erickson set a new state standard in the 100-yard backstroke, winning the state crown. East's medley relay, consisting of Erickson, Jim Latham, Norrie Hobart and Bob Jones, finished fourth at state after an undefeated season. Latham also took fifth place in the breast stroke while Jack Estes ranked second in state diving competition. Although defeated by Wyandotte three times during the regular season, the Lancers came back to place ahead of the Bulldogs at the state meet.

East compiled a winning record in dual meets, winning six and losing four and a balanced crew of veterans splashed to third place in the league meet. The Lancers won decisive victories over arch-rivals SM West and North twice.

The Lancers, swimming for the first time in the Roe Village pool, set four new school marks. Erickson established two, Latham and Estes one each.

East's netters rapidly prepared for the first big meet of the season, the Winfield Invitational. Other important matches such as the Ark City, League, Regional and State provided stiff competition for the netters. The toughest opponent for the Lancers this year was expected to be Winfield, defending state doubles champs.

Senior monogram winners Todd Ballinger, Don Drummond and Bruce Landeck, and junior John Towner were counted on to lead the team this spring. Ballinger was the state singles champion and was rated tenth nationally.

Other returning lettermen expected to help were juniors Sid Kanter, Jack Kilroy, Bill DeBaun and Mike Borders. A sophomore, Danny Oram, began showing great promise in early practice sessions.

With several of the outstanding netmen in the city, East showed unlimited ability.

TRACKMEN START YEAR

Under the leadership of Head Coach Roland Kahler, the 1964 S-M East track team opened its season with a third place showing at the State Indoor Meet at Manhattan. Following the State Indoor the Lancer thinclads next tallied a decisive victory over Topeka, Meige, and S-M West in a quadrangular meet.

Among the early season standouts were six returning lettermen. These lettermen were Mike Judd and Dick Elliott, sprinters; Wally Scott, broad jumper; Doug Winn, pole vaulter; George Dent, miler, and Jerry Leeds, hurdler. Other top track performers included John Williamson, Bruce Peterson, Dick Watkins, C. E. Wilson, Mike Reading, Warren Gille, Craig Fraser, Jack Ayres, Mike Kelly, and Frank Hoffman.

With an abundance of Seniors and a strong reserve of underclassmen, Coach Kahler's squad had depth in most events and was in a good position to place well at the KU and S-M relays, as well as the State Meet.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

Maintaining student interest in a variety of sports, the Girls' Athletic Association and the Boys' Intramurals Committee organized athletic activities for both recreation and physical skill.

The GAA, sponsored by Mrs. Howard and Miss Pepper, planned year round athletic competition. Girls gained and sustained membership by participating in game concessions and intramurals. The Girls' Athletic Association joined other schools in team and individual play through a series of playdays and sportsdays. Further, the association performed many non-athletic community projects.

As well as enjoying athletic challenge, members widened their views of sportsmanship and companionship.

The Boys' Intramurals Comittee of the Student Congress, with the guidance of Mr. Davis and Mr. Hammig, scheduled activities for the boys. The committee set up Saturday morning programs of basketball and considered plans for intramural wrestling. In the three hours of play each week, thirty-four student teams and two faculty teams competed. Boys also had an opportunity for experience as referees. Both knowledge of the rules and practical performance were stressed in the two intramurals programs.

Laurie Langteau successfully gets her point across as she exhibits modern methods of fencing in an opponent.

Shawnee Mission East stood—a building made of stone, glass, and steel. Alone, it was lifeless and cold. But people entered the building and it came to life with laughter and conversation. Each day, 2,300 students filled the silent halls with the sounds of scholars at work and play.

Sophomores entered the building with hesitant steps and groped for assurance in the tide of orientation and unfamiliar surroundings. Juniors, accustomed to the daily routine, took a step further into participation, one tangible creation of their advancement being the Junior-Senior Prom. Seniors, the Class of 1964, strode confidently through their building instigating, leading, and completing the activities of their final year.

The three classes mingled and overlapped as they melded to form the student body. Yet, each student retained his individuality, personally affected his environment and was in turn influenced by his surroundings. His mere presence identified him as an essential part of S-M East. He studied; he played. He laughed; he cried. He talked; he listened. He was a part of Shawnee Mission East.

He was you.

SCHOLASTIC BLUEPRINTS

Beginning with the primary strokes of adjustment, the sophomore class entered into the gallery of Shawnee Mission East's school life. The year started with fall orientation which sketched classes and activities.

Prominent in the sophomore scenery were the four class officers. While D. D. Wiard, president, outlined Tuesday assemblies and served on the O.C.A., vice-president Laurie Lewis came into the foreground as his alternate. Janet Mead, secretary, and Cindy Fry, treasurer, designed methods of notetaking and collecting class dues.

As the picture progressed, other sophomores combined vivid hues of activities as Student Congress representatives, athletics numeral winners, and choral group singers. With their spirit of obligation, these students became functioning components in the framework of school life.

Upon completing the portrait, the sophomore class illustrated a contrasting quality of participation and honor. As the year ended, S-M East's Class of '66 began outlining activities for the junior year.

JUNIORS ACTIVELY RISE TO OCCASION

With high school as a mountain, students began as sophomores at the base and ended as seniors at the peak. Between these two levels lay learning, social life, and school activities. The junior class found themselves midway in the climbing conquest.

The class officers divided executive duties to organize the juniors' expedition. President Dave Robinson headed assemblies; Vice-President Bet Newcomer planned Prom arrangements; Secretary Pat French took minutes, and Treasurer Betty Carter collected dues. This leadership guided the juniors' climb which offered opportunities to demonstrate capabilities in the classroom, on athletic fields, behind the music stand or the podium, and on stage.

The juniors, having completed two years of enterprising ascension, neared the senior summit of high school with cresting visions for next year.

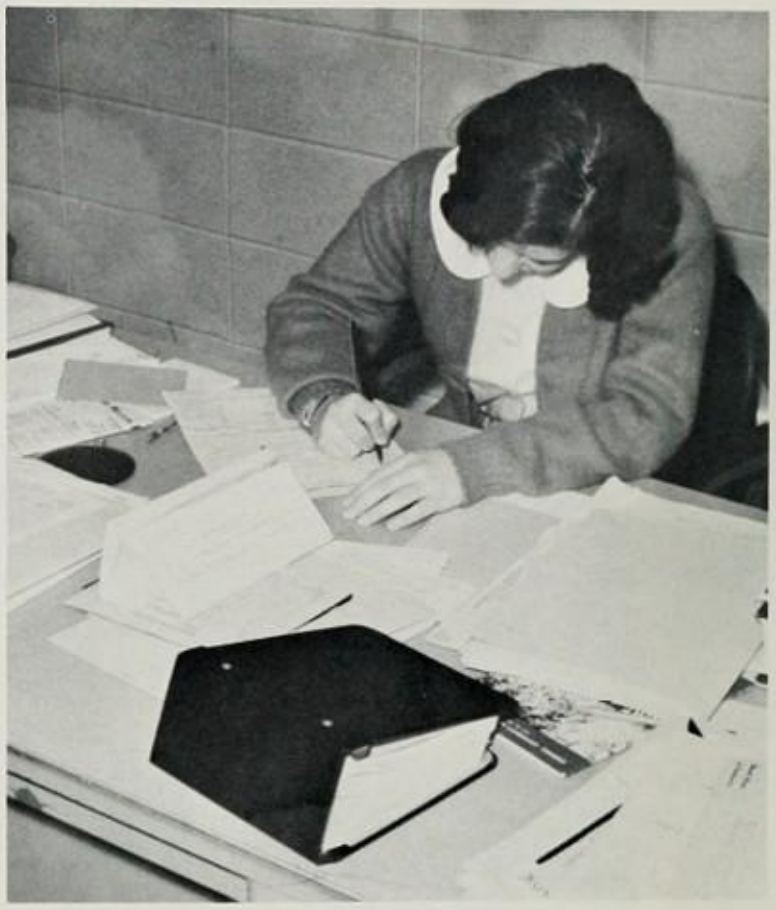
EXPERIENCE GIVES

Mr. Fisher irons out the difficulties in Ross Jay's schedule by replacing "clothing" with "boys' gym."



A college application affords the opportunity to elaborate on "name" and "vocational plans."

The senior class stood united. It provided student guidance for underclassmen; it organized school programs. Past years had provided the experience necessary for sound leadership, and the seniors accepted their responsibility. In meeting the challenge, they developed an intense class pride. They organized; they planned; they built.

Yet, in their haste to fulfill their plans and realize their dreams, the seniors continued to grow and change. Each member of the class began to assess his talents and discover his capabilities. Seniors tried themselves in athletic and scholastic contests and in the field of human relations.

As their final year at Shawnee Mission East drew to a close, the seniors saw themselves not as just a class, but as a group of separate individuals. And graduation was no longer the end, but the beginning, for the senior class of 1964.

Senior Class Officers: Tom Hummel, President; Sharon Katz, Secretary; Jayne Quimby, Treasurer; Bob Lutz, Vice-president.

Jan Monsees momentarily relaxes finding herself lost in the midst of campaign and thought.

Upon the command of Madame Crain, Marsha Barth stands at attention for cap and gown measuring maneuvers.

Gretchen —

Boy, Laurie sure has missed you and so have I. We haven't doubled with anyone as nice as you and Bob. In fact, we haven't doubled with anybody since. You know I haven't found anyone who I could talk to like I could you. I hope you are still as good on the flute as you were here. Good Luck and keep up the good work.

No Gretch!

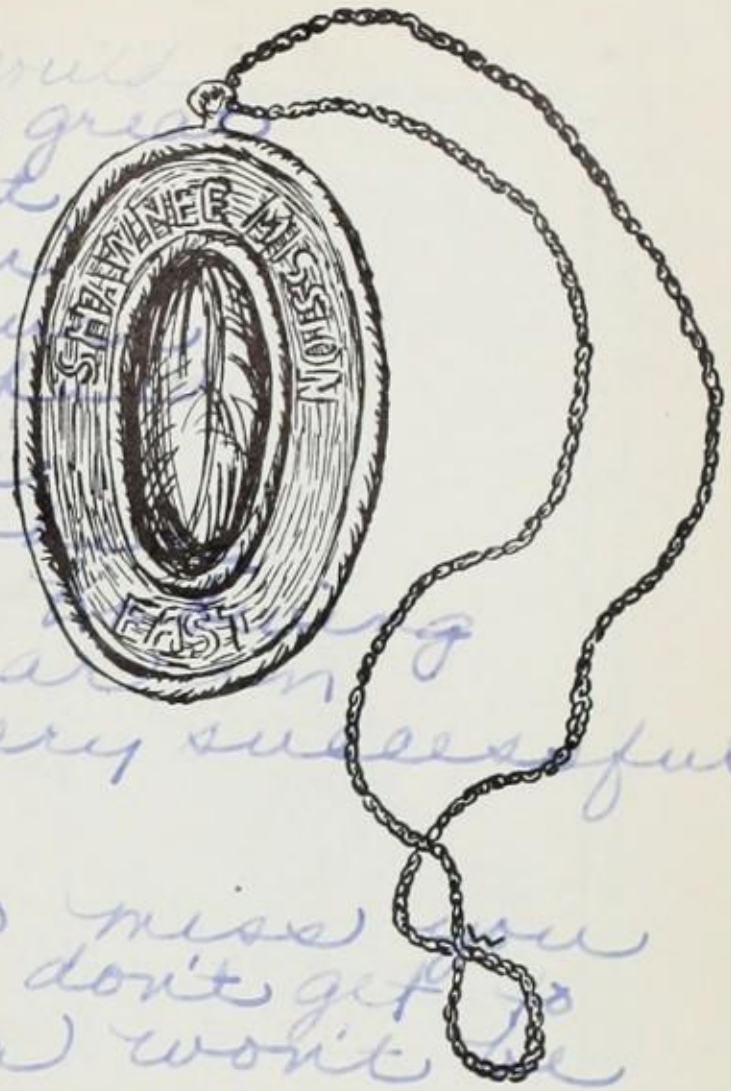
How do you like the 1964 Haubert? Great, isn't it. Sure wish more than anything you could have been here to enjoy this great year at this great school. You would have made it lots, lots more fun. I'll always remember the wonderful times we've had together, and will keep on having, only a little more sparsely. These past years I've been proud to be your friend + loved every minute with you. I'll miss you more this summer. Come up and see us. You're the greatest of friends! You'll never know what it is to me to confide in you and know you're there, no matter what. I feel like the luckiest person in the world. Gretch, I don't know what to say. I can't put into words all that your friendship means. (maby you'll understand the tears I can't help right now)

Sorry I messed up this whole page (I've actually said nothing) Gretch, your personality + talents will take you far. You will succeed at anything you do. I know. You're a "great kid with a fantastic future." I'll never, ever forget you + treasure the memories of you always.

Loads + Loads of luck + happiness!"
your friend, Jim "Jay"

Hey L-

I sure wish that you could be here to finish off this great year with all of us. But it's great for this year to be over finally! I sure hope that your year has been better than mine. It seems that everything I tried at flopped. But you, your short year in Okla City has been very successful, I'm positive.



I sure am going to miss you this summer, & if I don't get to see you, my summer won't be complete. I sure hope you can come to K.C. or Pam, Dee Ann & I can come to see you.

Gretchen, I know so we will ever forget you. It just doesn't seem possible that you won't be living here any more & that I can't call you on the phone. You'll always remain in the minds of people you have met and luck will follow you everywhere. I just can't say how much I miss you and the good times we had together. I promise to write to you more often (like I haven't been doing) because it doesn't make it seem we're so far apart. Love & Luck always.

Gretchen,

This year really hasn't been very much fun since you left. We had a lot of fun while you were here. Especially during band. Remember all those football games. But most of all, the times before all the games when we got dressed. I don't think I'll ever find an easy way to put those spats on. I hope you are enjoying your new school, but I still wish you were here. It will never be the same without you. Well so long and Good luck.

Suzette (Fig)

Gretchen

When Laurie said "Anyone want to sign Gretchen's Hand
I almost couldn't believe it! Really, I'm really glad I got a chance to sign it. By now you should be settled in Okla
City and lots of friends. That's something you couldn't help. I really enjoyed knowing you the fairly short time I did. I rea wish it was more.

School around here has been comparatively dull, but I guess you know all about that from letters.

Well, take it easy and don't get too many Okla City boys.

DON'T LET ANYONE TELL YOU DIFFERENT. IT SAYS '65 ON THE SIDE.

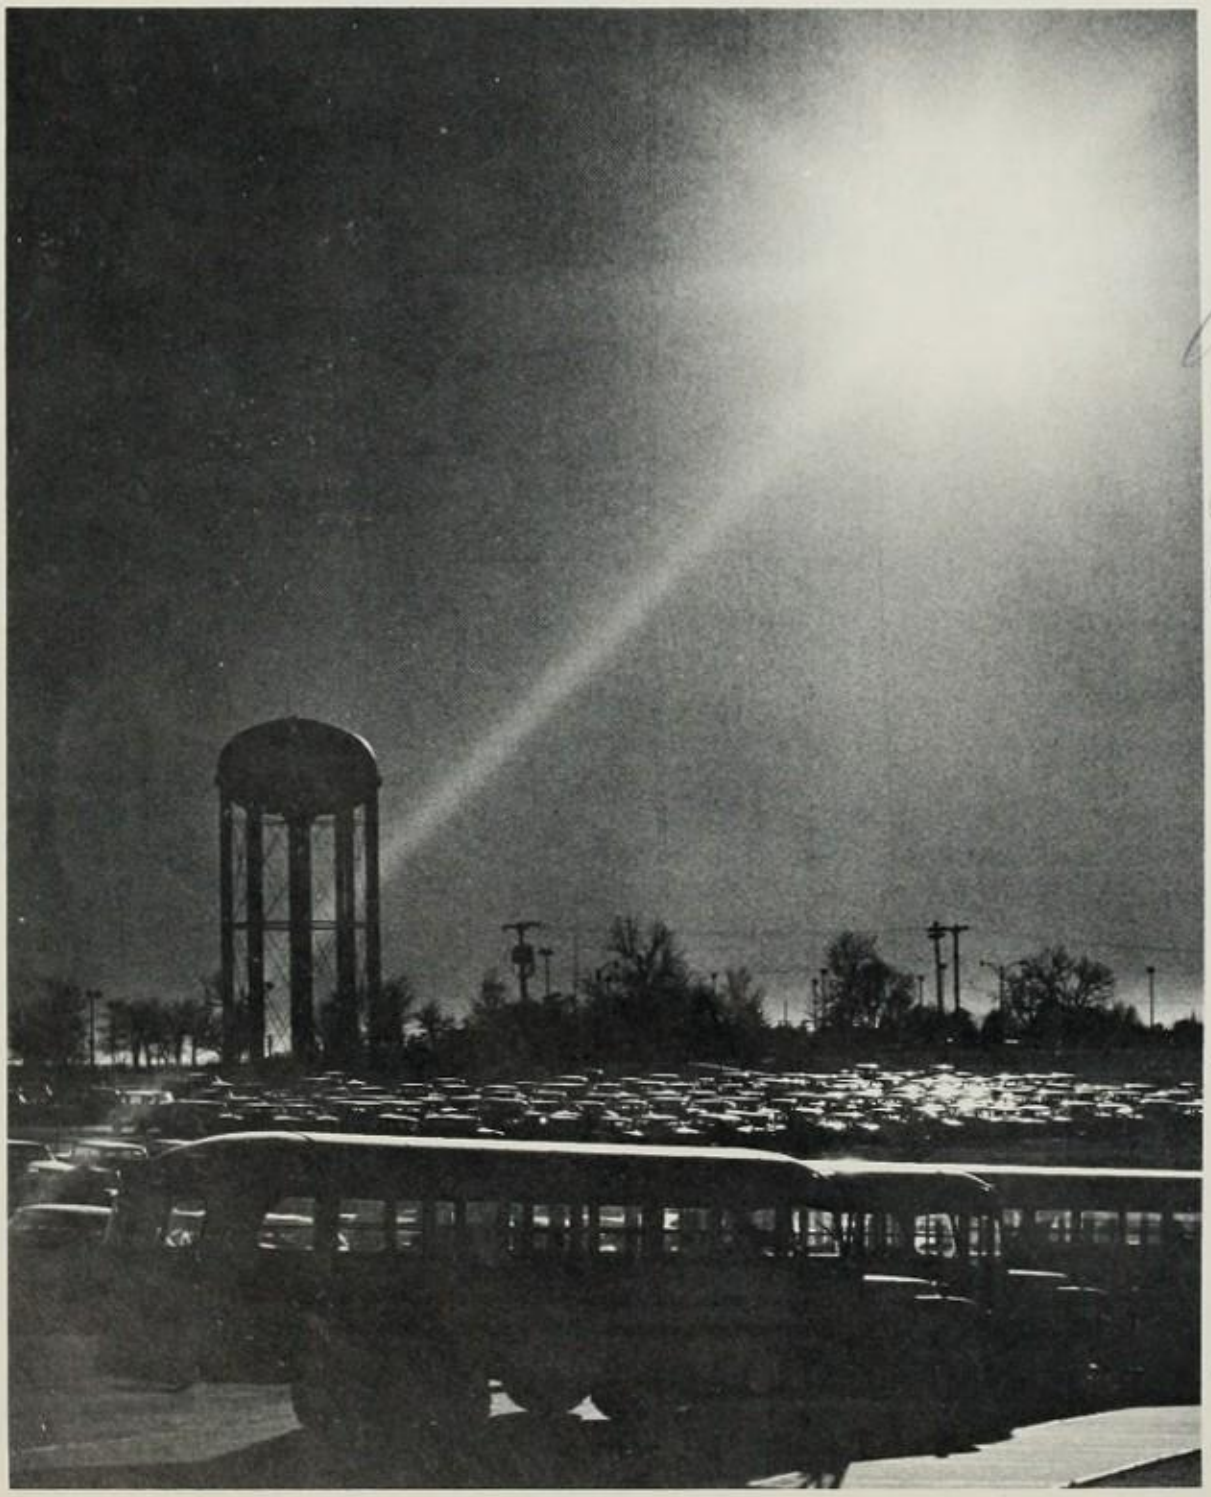
Bob Paulette '65

Hello Gretchen,
How do you like Oklahoma? We've missed you in band this year. You missed seeing the Band beat the SWE & get a I at District Music Festival. It was a long, hard pull all the way. Hope to see you again if you come up.
Good luck always.
Karen Wicks

. . .This was Shawnee Mission East during a year of developing traditions, changing attitudes, widened outlooks, expanded knowledge—a year of life

September had held an air of anticipation and eagerness for making the year "the best ever". Our expectations were grounded as we met the year's challenges. By spring we were able to review the progress of our studies and activities finding realizations where mere intentions had once stood. The sophomores had become seasoned in all the aspects of school life. Juniors had reached the middle ground; alluding to "senbior privileges," seniors had come to the termination of their high school careers.

May was the finale with commencement and semester exams. Yet, the illusion of finality will not endure, for the year has been captured here and will be relived in the memories of the students. The building, the people, the activities were yours. And you were Shawnee Mission East, 1963-1964.



Gretchen, dear
Greetings from the Finest, Greatest
to see you go!
Have been great
And without you
I hope every thing
been going ade
Luck in all your

EDITOR'S LETTER

As this school year ends so does a phase of our lives, leaving behind only memories. Throughout the year it has been the goal of the staff to capture and preserve those memories in the 1964 HAUBERK. The nine editors and twenty staff members have assumed this task filling the 288 pages of the book with a complete pictoral and literary coverage of the year.

The year began with a vigorous sales campaign led by Publicity Manager Martha Griffin. Art Editor Marti Elsen used her exceptional talent in completing the unique color process and in designing the cover. The business staff led by Manager Bob Beachy added advertising sales to campaign profits and also produced the senior summaries and index. Literary Editor Jan Rogers created the division copy while leading her staff through long hours of copy writing and picture captioning. Photographers, led by Editor Mike Loeb, tirelessly took and retook pictures of a quality unequalled in the past. Susan Woodside, Studio Editor, creatively posed group shots while scheduling and processing the individual student body pictures. Athletic events were recorded by the sports staff led by Editor Steve Moyer. Kit Caldwell, Treasurer, kept records, and typists Carole Funkhouser and Candy Kittle clarified the copy.

The satisfaction gained from working in a unified effort to accomplish the large task of creating this book is immense. The staff has put its entire effort into producing a tangible set of memories which will become a most long lasting and well read history book.

". . .And so my fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country. . . .My fellow citizens of the world, ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man. . . .With a good conscience our only sure reward, with history the final judge of our deed, let us go forth to lead the land we love, asking His blessing and His help, but knowing that here on earth God's work must truly be our own."

Gretchen -

This year has been great except for the absences of you. It seems strange after all our years of fights + friendships that now when we should be having the best times of our lives, we're hundreds of miles apart. I wish that you could be here and have as good a time at East as I am. But I guess you having a good time where you are. This Hanbeck is really great this yeaar and I hope it brings back some memories for you. I hope to see you this summer. Until then —

Love
Paula

Gretchen,

You don't know me very well (lucky you) but I'm glad I met you, anyway. If you were still up here maybe we would be good friends, I like to think that. Lots of luck with all that you do. So long.
